Seibien

By Foot

Dining

A unique style of landscaping called "Oishi Bugaku-ryu" has been inherited from the past in Tsugaru. Seibien, a government-designated historic site, is a typical example of this gardening style. Seibikan, standing in one corner of Seibien, is a unique building with a purely Japanese-style structure on the first floor and a western style-structure on the second floor. The architecture is characteristic of buildings during the Rokumeikan age. The beauty of the building harmonizes with the garden, evoking a scene from the Meiji Era.

Tsugaru Lacquer Ware

By Foot

Shopping

This traditional lacquerware dating from the middle of the Edo Period has been passed down without change for over 300 years. Instead of painting a design over a coating, the item is coated with several layers of lacquer and then polished to create a design. The features of this lacquerware are complex, beautiful lacquer pattern, which is the result of this process being repeated dozens of times over more than two months, and its strong sturdy feel.
