Seibien

By Foot

Dining

A unique style of landscaping called "Oishi Bugaku-ryu" has been inherited from the past in Tsugaru. Seibien, a government-designated historic site, is a typical example of this gardening style. Seibikan, standing in one corner of Seibien, is a unique building with a purely Japanese-style structure on the first floor and a western style-structure on the second floor. The architecture is characteristic of buildings during the Rokumeikan age. The beauty of the building harmonizes with the garden, evoking a scene from the Meiji Era.

ASPAM

By Foot

Shopping

The first building you lay eyes on in the bay area is a 15 story pyramid-shaped one that stands at 76m. It is Aomori's source of tourism and product related information. This eye-catching spot also offers a 360° digital 3D theater, the biggest in Japan, which shows the four seasons of Aomori Prefecture, a restaurant/observation deck, restaurants serving local cuisine, and the prefecture's largest souvenir shop where you can buy fresh agriculture and marine products as well. The hands-on corner and the Tsugaru shamisen performance held twice a day are also a hit!

Tsugaru Lacquer Ware

By Foot

Shopping

This traditional lacquerware dating from the middle of the Edo Period has been passed down without change for over 300 years. Instead of painting a design over a coating, the item is coated with several layers of lacquer and then polished to create a design. The features of this lacquerware are complex, beautiful lacquer pattern, which is the result of this process being repeated dozens of times over more than two months, and its strong sturdy feel.

Hirosaki Cherry Blossom Festival

By Public Transport

Topics

This is Japan's largest cherry blossom festival, boasting 2,600 Yoshino cherry blossom trees, weeping cherries, double cherry blossoms, and others blooming everywhere in Hirosaki Park. At Nishibori, the cherry blossom trees form a tunnel over your head. Reflection of the full bloom on the waters of the moat running around the castle and the illumination at night create a fantastic scene. Enjoy the sights of Spring at full height as the white walls of Hirosaki Castle contrast beautifully with the interwoven pinks of the cherry blossoms.
