Wakayama Ramen

By Public Transport

Dining

Wakayama ramen is referred to as chuka-soba. A popular type is accompanied by a soy sauce broth. The popularity of these noodles began from a number of roadside stalls that sprang up next to the tramlines that ran through Wakayama City. Although the soup appears dark brown in color, it is characteristically light and not oily when eaten. Another popular choice is a broth made from pork bone seasoned with soy sauce. The combination of pork stock and soy sauce works really well and the soup has a delicious profound flavor that really makes it stand out.

Kishu lacquerware

By Public Transport

Shopping

The lacquerware from the Wakayama area, known as "KishuShikki," has been made in the area since the Muromachi Period. The tradition started when woodworking artisans living and working in Kuroe began producing hand turned wooden bowls. These traditional techniques in woodworking and lacquerware have been improved and refined over more than 400 years. Nowadays KishuShikki encompasses everyday items for the home, accessories and a wide range of souvenirs and gifts.

Wakayama Castle

By Public Transport

Main Attractions

Wakayama Castle was built on the orders of ToyotomiHidenaga, younger brother of ToyotomiHideyoshi who conquered the land of Kishu in 1585. During the Edo Period, Tokugawa Yorinobu, the tenth son of Tokogawaleyasu, entered the castle and it was known as Kishu Castle with 555,000 "koku" rice yield. This was the start of the castle's long and eventful history. The Tokugawa clan in Kishu allied with the Mito and Owari branches of the Tokugawa family to form the Tokugawa Gosanke (top three families) that dominated Japanese domestic rule for centuries. You can enjoy a great view across the downtown of Wakayama City by climbing the castle tower.

Koyasan Choishimichi (Stone Marker Path)Walk

By Public Transport

Topics

The Koyasan Choshimichi is one of the seven so-called paths to Koyasan. The path was opened just after Kukai (Kobodaishi) founded Koyasan as a place of Buddhist worship. From Jison-in Temple in the Kinokawa River basin, across monasteries of Koyasan, up to the mausoleum of Kukai located deep in the interior of Mt. Koya, the KoyasanChoshimichi is the path through the entire Koyasan area.
