

kasumaki(Sweet bean rolls)

By Foot

Dining

Kasumaki is a confectionery unique to Tsushima, consisting of red bean paste wrapped in thick castella sponge cake. In the Edo period (1603–1868), the ruling family of the Tsushima domain welcomed the feudal lord returning from a year of residence in the capital (present-day Tokyo) by serving this treat filled with mochi rice cake, which was a luxury at the time. Today, the traditional sweet is popular among residents and tourists, and is often given as a souvenir.

Ishiyaki(Stone Cooking)

By Foot

Dining

The waters of Tsushima are fine fishing grounds that offer plenty of marine products. Ishiyaki cuisine heats special stones called "sekiei-hangan" (quartz-porphry), and places fresh seafood on these stones to cook. The dynamic technique was originally devised by fishermen, who prepared their meals and kept warm on shore. Infrared heat retains the soft texture of the ingredients and bring out the best flavor.

Iriyaki

By Foot

Dining

Iriyaki is a type of traditional stew containing either chicken or fish such as largescale blackfish or Japanese amberjack, and vegetables. It was so named because the main ingredients were originally roasted (iri) in camellia oil before cooking (yaki). The flavor varies by district and by family, but the dish is often served on formal occasions and is a favorite of all island residents.

Ofunae Port

By Foot

Main Attractions

The former Ofunae Port has five berths for boats of the Tsushima domain at the mouth of the Kuta River, which flows into Kutaura. What remains today is believed to have been completed in 1663. The stone embankment retains its original form, and the main gate, warehouse, and building in which the feudal lord rested suggest the grandeur of the residence.

Taishu Soba Noodle Making

By Public Transport

Topics

Soba noodles are said to have come to Japan from China through the Korean Peninsula, first arriving in Tsushima in the late Jomon period (ca 14,000 BC–300 BC). Although new varieties of buckwheat are developed across Japan, Taishu soba uses a rare variety close to the original. Visitors are invited to experience the joy of making soba noodles from this buckwheat, small in grain size and strong in flavor, and uses no thickener.
