

At Zen temples, meals are announced with the striking of a cloud-shaped bronze gong called an unpan. This gong is a reproduction of an unpan cast in 1326 for Enpukuji Temple, which occupied the site prior to Zuiganji's construction. It later hung in Zuiganji's kitchen and living quarters (kun). The original is designated an Important Cultural Property and is kept in the Seiryuden Temple Museum.