

Pellet Stove Usage

The Ministry of the Environment uses environmentally-friendly pellet stoves. These burn biomass pellets (made from living organic sources and not fossil fuels), a sustainable form of energy. The carbon dioxide emissions from the burning of biomass pellets are used in photosynthesis by trees, helping to maintain an appropriate balance of greenhouse gases.