

Based on this map of Gifu Castle created sometime between 1650 and 1750, this long, flat area is thought to have been used as a place for hitching and corralling horses. According to a member of the Owari Clan who visited the castle in 1717, high-ranking vassals and guests would dismount and leave their horses here before walking to the castle's upper sections.