

Honbo

The honbo is located to the northwest of the Zaodo, or main hall. The current structure was built in 1924. For several decades, it was used to house the administration office of Kinpusenji Temple and as a place to receive honored guests.

The building, which is also called Chisenkaku, is an unusually fine example of modern Japanese architecture.