

First period

The Old Public Hall is an example of Western style architecture, but it also has Japanese elements, such as a tiled roof. When completed in 1910, its walls were painted blue-grey and yellow, a vivid color scheme characteristic of Western architecture in the Meiji era (1868–1912).