

Design and building materials

The Old Public Hall is an example of Western architecture from the Meiji era (1868–1912), but it also incorporates Japanese and Chinese motifs. Its builders used materials often seen in Western-style buildings in Japan, as well as local materials that are not often used outside of Hokkaido.