

Talismans

Some of the decorative features of Inuyama Castle serve as talismans (mayoke) to guard against disasters such as lightning strikes and fire, which were an ever-present threat to this predominantly wooden building. Among these talismans are clay tiles that adorn the castle's roof and are shaped like turtle shells topped with peaches. These symbols are borrowed from ancient Chinese traditions and are believed to ward off evil.