

Foundation Stones

The great hall originally built for the Daibutsu is thought to have been supported by sixty large foundation stones, of which fifty-six remain in the area around the statue. All are shaped from a very hard type of rock from the Nebu River. Some of these foundation stones are now used as decorative garden rocks or water basins on the temple grounds.