

Early Accounts by Western Travelers

In the sixteenth century, merchants and envoys from Europe visited Japan for the first time as their nations began to expand their trade and colonial expansion into Asia. Visitors from Spain, Portugal, England, and Holland all left accounts of the striking size and beauty of the Great Buddha.