

Nipponia Hotel

The Nipponia Hotel is a Japanese-style accommodation located in the heart of Takehara's historic district, which has been designated an Important Preservation District for Groups of Historic Buildings. It provides a comfortable, traditional place for visitors to stay while they experience the old part of town and enjoy the local food.

The hotel opened in 2019. There are 10 guest rooms in two buildings. The reception is located in the main building, originally built in 1923 as a restaurant.

The building opposite the main building was originally a bank built in 1902, during the Meiji era (1868–1912). Its guest rooms have been incorporated into the original structure, which remains intact to maintain the historic atmosphere. The space is designed to provide guests with a traditional Japanese experience. Modern facilities have been incorporated to ensure guests stay in comfort. All rooms include a cypress wood (hinoki) bath.

There are an additional four rooms in a former sake brewery on the main street of the historic district (Honmachi-dori), which was built in the late Edo period (1603–1867).

The hotel provides high-quality service such as a concierge with local expert knowledge to help guests with information about the history of the area and its must-see attractions.
